

Request for Proposals:

Community-Based Research Projects in Cannabis and Mental Health

The Mental Health Commission of Canada is seeking applications from priority populations who are interested in conducting community-based research (CBR) on the relationship between cannabis and mental health.

Award amount: Up to $50,000 per year (over two years for a total of $100,000)

Deadline to apply: April 23rd, 2020

Priority populations

- People with lived and living experience of cannabis use and/or mental health problems or illnesses
- First Nations, Inuit, and Métis
- Immigrant, refugee, ethnocultural, and racialized
- Two spirit, lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans, and queer
- Communities who experience layers of oppression (e.g., homelessness, involvement in the justice system, sex work, buying or selling street-level substances)

Who can apply?

- Peer-driven advocacy or community-based organizations
- Academic and emerging researchers

Interested in applying?

- Join our informational webinar on March 4, 2020, from 1- 2:30 p.m. ET.
- Visit <https://adobe.ly/2REhjiU> to register!

Need more information?

- Visit <https://www.mentalhealthcommission.ca/English/mental-health-and-substance-use-research>
- email us at cannabis@mentalhealthcommission.ca

Mental Health
Commission of Canada

Commission de la santé mentale
du Canada

Financial contribution from

